- Marie: Dear Diary, Today I went to a park. When I ate a donut for a snack, some of it fell on the (Narration) ground. Then, many ants came and started to carry those pieces away. They were so busy. I looked at them for a while and wanted to know more about ants. Then, a young lady talked to me.
- Sara: What are you looking at? Oh, ants!
- Marie: Huh?
- Sara: Oops, did I surprise you?
- Marie: Well, maybe a little.
- Sara: Hmm. Where is their nest? I know! ①It must be near that big tree.
- Marie: I think so, too...
- Sara: These ants are called worker ants. But to tell you the truth, not all the ants in a group work hard. About one third of them don't work. They just stay in the nest. They are lazy!
- Marie: Really? Are there ants that don't like to work?
- Sara: Uh-huh.
- Marie: But how do you know about the ants in the nest? Their nests are under the ground!
- Sara: You can make a special nest and watch them. For example, you put a kind of cement in a clear plastic box and then put in a group of ants. Soon, worker ants will start digging tunnels and making rooms in the cement.
- Marie: Cool! One question. All ants look the same. How can I *tell one from the other?
- Sara: Well, you put colors on their backs. Take color pens and put marks on each ant with different colors. Then, you know a purple ant is working hard all the time while a blue ant is resting.
- Marie: Watching them would be so interesting!
- Sara: We also use a video camera to record the ants' movements. Then, we can learn how each ant moves.
- Marie: You can stop or *rewind the video. That's convenient!
- Sara: Right. With this method, we found out that ants that stay in the nests are young ants. Older ones go outside and work.
- Marie: I didn't know that! Do you think hard-working ants get angry with lazy ants?
- Sara: I don't think ants have such feelings. But sometimes, hard-working ants touch lazy ants, "Knock, knock!" Then, lazy ants sometimes begin to work.
- Marie: That's cool!
- Sara: I know, ants are so interesting. I can look at them all day!
- Marie: Umm, why do you know so much about ants?
- Sara: I study about them at my university.
- Shinichi: Sara, I'm sorry to keep you waiting...Oh, Marie?
- Marie: Hi, Shinichi!
- Shinichi: Huh? Do you know each other?

Sara: Oh, you're Marie! I've heard so much about you from Shinichi.
Marie: Huh?
Shinichi: Umm...Marie, this is Sara, my girlfriend.
Marie: Wow! So, I learned that not all ants work. ② I also learned that *insect lovers love insect (Narration) lovers. Interesting!

- 6 次の英文とグラフは、ケン(Ken)が昭和学院中学校の生徒の健康習慣(Healthy Habits)を調べた結果です。
グラフと英文を読んで、設問に答えなさい。

Many students want to build good habits to stay healthy. But they do these habits at different times. Some students do them every day, but others do them once a week.

I asked 431 students in Showa Gakuin Junior High School about four important habits: getting enough sleep, exercising every day, eating healthy food, and spending time outside. The results were very interesting.

Eating healthy food was the most common habit. Students said they try to eat fresh vegetables and other healthy foods every day. Sleeping enough was the second most common habit. But more than half of the students do not sleep well. I think this is because many of them use smartphones late at night. If students don't sleep enough, they may have trouble paying attention in class. They may also feel too tired at school.

Exercising every day was less common. Only 38% of teenagers said they exercise every day. This was surprising because many students at Showa Gakuin are taking part in sports clubs like basketball, tennis, and handball. And the fewest number of students were spending time outside. It looks like many students don't enjoy playing outside.

Students are trying, but there are problems. Healthy food is good, but sleep, exercise, and time outside are not enough. Walk a little or use a smartphone less. It can help. If students keep these habits, they will feel better at school.
